

It feels as if the onlooker were caught up in the middle of things. He does not only see what happens, but can actually feel it. He is drawn into the moment as if he were taking part in it. This is authentic. This is participatory photography.

